COURSE DESCRIPTION:

This course explores how the Holocaust has been constructed as an historical event. Beginning in the mid-1940s, with the first attempts to narrate what had transpired during the Nazi era, this seminar traces the ways that the Holocaust became codified as a distinct episode in history. Taking a chronological approach, the course follows the evolution of historical and popular ideas about the Holocaust and considers the different perspectives presented by a variety of sources. We will examine documentary films, memoirs, survivor testimonies, as well as other scholarly and popular representations of the Holocaust. Students will be introduced to unfamiliar sources and also asked to reconsider some well-known Holocaust documents and institutions.

The course will be conducted as a seminar, requiring diligent preparation and active participation from all students. Students are expected to read and analyze all assignments before class and contribute to class discussions. Class preparation and participation are crucial elements of this course and will be considered as part of the final grade.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS:

- Every class will begin with a brief session called "Say Something." All students should be prepared to offer a one-minute oral response to the week's reading. This means expressing a reaction or opinion: raising one question, criticism, or issue that relates to the assignment. Students are expected to prepare and participate actively in every class discussion.

- Class presentation: This course is affiliated with the CWiC (Communication within the Curriculum) program and presentations of research-in-progress will be a central component of the course. All students will be required to give presentations of their work, identifying central themes of their projects and raising key questions for discussion. In addition, all students will act as a facilitator for one presentation, guiding the discussion of another student's project. Students will be required to meet with a CWiC peer advisor in the week prior to their presentations.

As a rule, the discussion of each project will take 15 minutes, including a 5-7 minute presentation by the student and the remaining time for questions and dialogue about the issues raised. Students will carefully plan their presentations, using them to formulate key concepts and questions, and also to consider revising opinions and ideas. In addition to the facilitator, who will conduct and guide the discussion, all students will be expected to participate actively in the conversation. The two weeks that we will devote to discussion of your research will constitute a workshop designed to improve the quality of your work.

- Research Paper: All students will be asked to write a 17-22 page research paper on a topic related to the themes of the seminar. You are free to choose your own topic, but you should do so in consultation with me. We will discuss potential topics throughout the semester.

No Later than October 29: you should choose a topic and confirm it with me.

On November 5: you should submit a detailed prospectus for your paper along with a working bibliography.
